Aug 16, 1967 (Weather clear)

Up at 5:45. Left house at 6:45 - heavy traffic on Rt 2. Stopped in Cambridge at lab for the watch. Heavy traffic all the way to airport. Arrived airport 7:55 Walked about a mile to get to plane! Aboard plane at 8:10 Engine problems - took off at 8:37. Aerial Chicago on schedule at 9:30 CST.

Northwest flight 3 took off a bit late - non stop to Anchorage Alaska. Route over L. Michigan across Northern Minnesota - International Falls → Kenora Ont - Jct Nakon → Whitehorse → across Yukon Terr to Anchorage. Weather was clear over the northern Canadian Rockies and the Alaska coast range - a truly fantastic flight over the ice fields and glaciers of the Mt St Elias Range. Have never seen such huge masses of glacial ice. Followed the immense braided stream - the Liard River. Crossed the Alcan highway several times. Much of the trip was over totally uninhabited country. Arrived Anchorage at 1:45PM local time - about 6 hours flying time. Owing to the Fairbanks flood disaster almost did not get a room. While trying to call home to get name of my hotel which was already booked for me my baggage was put back on the plane and is now on the way to Tokyo! Fortunately got one of the last rooms in town - at the Nikko Gardens Motel ($16.00 the night) Alaska is very expensive. Dinner Japanese style king crab = 3.75 Japanese beer 90¢ per bottle U.S. 75¢

Aug 17 - Raining, heavy clouds & cool ∧ Brkfst at Café down toward town 100 yds - $1.40. Interesting conversation with a Donald Glass - an independent farmer - prospector from near Dayton, Ohio who spends summers in Alaska developing ore bodies & exploration gets crops in in Ohio & after the corn is knee high & sprayed takes off to Alaska. Is a batchelor & apparently very successful in farming & investments.

Tokyo, Japan (Aug 18)

A continuation of the same day except that it is now the 18th and midnight - The last two days are all interformed with time zone changes covering 11 hours difference in in time between here & Boston.

Spent the morning in Anchorage - in the rain - bought a rain coat for batteries for the camera, newspaper etc returned to motel at 12:15 & left for airport at 12:45. Plane an hour late but left Anchorage at 3:20 PM local time Aug 17. Anchorage is a raw bleak city by standards to the south but bustling and prosperous. It will probably absorb quite a bit of Fairbanks after the current flood disaster. Over 4000 persons have evacuated Fairbanks for Anchorage the past two days.

The sun came out very briefly just before leaving the airport - the mountains are truly beautiful & spectacular in the afternoon sun & clouds all the way across the west Alaska mainland and well out over the Pacific. No really clear sky until near the approach to Tokyo. Landed at Tokyo about 5:30 local time & sun shining hazily. Took 2 hours to get suitcase out and the rest of the baggage cleared because of inexplicable delay in locating NW Orient air lines agent. Limousine about 50 minutes to New Otani Hotel.

This is a superlative hotel and the most complex & fascinating I have ever seen. There may be some thing like it in the U.S. but I have not seen it — nor elsewhere in the world.

Checked in, changed clothes, shaved & had dinner in the Belle Vue room on the 16th floor. A fantastic panorama of this largest city in the world in its multiplicity of colored lights, highways and the inordinate jumble of patterns spread over square miles under the August night — and over all the full moon clear and bright from this vantage above the haze of the city. First memories of Tokyo shall always remain and they are of the most pleasant perhaps because of the phantasmagoria of feeling that you are almost on the other side of the world and yet have only just left home so few hours ago. The lure of the Orient is no longer obstructed by time as it was in the days of ships.

Observations -

Drive to left ~~of~~ instead of right

Japanese cabs are reasonable - drivers usually wear white gloves small cabs cheaper than large? No tips. Very courteous

I think not although it would be true

Japanese women said to have small breasts but very petite figures. Said to be long waisted and with full thighs + calves

General average height of both men + women much under Europeans + U.S. men + women. Hair color almost universally black + eyes brown - often universally dark. Complexion varies from almost pure white to about a color between quadroon and octaroon - most generally about color of a southern European - but there seems to be a great variation unassociated with the mongoloid ("oriental") features & nose & eyes. Some Japanese have almost "caucasian" physiognomy, yet may be fairly dark complectioned. Eyes & color are not consistent with association. All clerks and servants are extremely polite and pleasant - especially the women. Clerks bow their heads when paid. When waiters or barenders go on duty they bow, not just nod, to the head waiter or "boss", who also bows in return.

- More later

Went to Tokyo Prince Hotel to register the morning after breakfast + haircut. Received the Bag - about 20 lbs of abstracts and other papers - also a draft against the Bank of Tokyo for ¥70,000 ($194.40) This is much more than I had expected to receive from the Japanese Science Council.

Observations

Went downtown this afternoon to purchase liquor and other things. Downtown Tokyo is a mad whirl of traffic and people - all well dressed in summer cotton clothes. The Kimono is not commonly seen on the streets and I suspect that most of the women in Ginza later — No! Geisha are rarely known now seen anymore

Traditional dress are ~~Geisha girls~~, although obviously the older women in kimonos are not. On the street, in the crowded Department stores and other shops probably 95% of the women are in occidental dress and with short length about knee height — saw no women in nylons, although excellent nylons are on sale in the Dept. stores. Probably are common in the cooler months. The girls in the hotel here all wear stockings while at work or on duty: Neat & pretty. ~~Good~~ My room looks down on the front entrance to the hotel from the 9th floor and presents an excellent view of what goes on. About 5:30 a large number of ~~[redacted]~~ Kimonoed girls arrived by taxi. Where they go I don't know, there are not too many men in the lobby, but this is a huge hotel ??

Taxi cabs are legion in Tokyo & there is no problem of getting around town. There are 16 lined up waiting at the moment (6 PM) and 12 unloading. They come in & out in an endless stream. Despite the mad driving everything seems to flow along like the flow of electrons in

* The Japanese are not accustomed practically to keys - have often got locked out of their hotel rooms. Inside the rooms! - Hence the large "paddles" attached to the keys

Dancing and dramatic performances before the buffet style dinner. Much food, sake & other drinks. Met there – Karl Dittmar, E. J. Gustes, Cyril Pearson-perm. Bruce Stone.

This AM 2 visitors from Tokyo Times. Interview. They borrowed 2 lantern slides - promised to return them by 10 AM Monday.

Yesterday had interview with 2 rep - resentatives of Radio Japan. They borrowed 4 lantern slides - promised to return them by Tuesday noon.

Attendance at Congress is a bit over 5000 representing 51 countries. This is too large a group for any single function except the Welcome reception at the Budokan (Bodoken) – it is possible that this may be the last International Biochemical Congress held in one place simply because of the sheer number of participants. At this Congress, of 2000 papers submitted only 500 are to be given! I am fortunate to have been invited!

The above statement is not true - The weather is associated with typhoon #18 - 50 or 50 W of Tokyo and approaching Kanto tonight - heavy. Mitsuko Hara Aug 22 - raining heavily.

Picked up the slides today - had to be reduced to 50 mm square. The results are terrible, cost ¥4600! Typhoon 18 still erratically moving about south of here. Heavy overcast all day, some rain by dark. Received letter from Dorothy this morning. Very nice. Cab to Asahi Shimbashi area tonight. Had drink at the Daiichi Hotel Bar Hehia - Raining lightly when I left, walked along tracks (to left) toward Imperial - a huge excavation where the old hotel is being removed. About two streets above. The Imperial "hole" stopped in for a drink at a very clean but somewhat smallish "club" - Uraku St ?

Lunch at Fuji View Hotel then up to 6th station on Mt Fuji (7200 ft.) Cold rain + swirling clouds. Mostly a boreal forest above about 5000 feet - very dense vegetation. Cost of trip ¥6000

Up at 7:30. Colloquium starts at 9:30. My deglucated lantern slides (50 mm sq.) are awful. Fortunately I met Dr Shinya Inoue near the door to the Tachibana Room where the meeting is being held. He had an assistant of his bring a projector from the University & at the last minute I was able to use my slides - 10:30 A.M. Prof. Alexander Oparin was in front row - through his wife as interpreter he asked several questions after my talk. Later when the meeting was over he shook my hand and congratulated me!

posed entirely of very narrow streets laid out in perfect squares or multiples thereof. This area is a curious mixture of homes, apartments and purely mercantile enterprise. I think of the endless rice fields we went through today on the train from Tokyo to Nagoya and here.

The Japanese cultivate almost every square inch of their land. In many country houses one could easily jump from the bedroom window into the rice. Even in front yards and along the sides of houses in town the land is cultivated — mostly rice, some taro and some vegetables.

My bed is made up for me — about 4 inches from the floor — is a mattress affair about ± 6 x 3½ feet with a pillow case tied with a bow knot around a very small pillow. Dont know how it will work. Have a small table lamp and am writing this sitting on the floor at my table with a small table lamp for light. Wrote letters + cards then spent the day wandering around the port of Kyoto. The aspect of the section is uniquely oriented on appearances - narrow streets lined solid with shops - a sort of gigantic arcade. The human agony that was suffered here could never be consciously analyzed by any one mind. The Museum itself and its gallery of horrors retelling the awful events of the morning of Aug 6 stands peacefully near the remains and the restoration of this day. This is a sobering experience to feel and it creeps into your mind and you feel a sense of guilt for this mass murder and outrage against fellow men. I noticed on the train yesterday that very few Japanese families travelling seem to have more than two children - usually only one. If two the father carries the 2nd child. It may be that although the Japanese have developed a somewhat cynical attitude about babies - [illegible] are not to human life, because they are as realistic as any people could be - they are affectionate as parents. The mothers seem to dote over their children especially the toddlers. This may be a reflection of their Confucian attitude - the children they want they love the more the little ones always seem to be very content & happy.

This morning went down to Ginza after first conferring the new schedule at Pan Am office. To Mikimoto. What a place for pearls. I wonder what the value of the pearls just exhibited under the glass counters. Hundreds of larger necklaces each 2mm to 2 thousand each. Probably a number of millions of ¥ are inside by just looking around the store. that owing to the success of the science of cultivating pearls that their value is over inflated?
The clerk spoke fair English, was informative and I left knowing only a little, but probably accurate, about the merchandising of pearls.

A most relaxing evening, although Tokyo seems a real home after a

The cabs here are driven by Kamikaze

Special ¥ 700! about 3 PM. This is a beautiful summer afternoon - one of the very few in Tokyo since I have been here.
Too bad I picked a poor summer to spend so few days or weeks in Japan.
One thing which annoyes me is the differ-

My last day in Japan. The hotel is now beginning to throng with Asians - mostly accompanied by ... Meeting of the Ontario Steamer Meeting day the Steamer would visit Tokyo instead of Singapore was a mystery to me.

My last visit to the Ginza - Matsuzakaya Dept Store etc. It was a temptation to buy more at the "delicatessen" in the Matsuzakaya basement shop. Can't take it home - One major problem in Tokyo is the sheer logistic problem of hauling things back & forth - to hotels or commercial establishments for packing & shipping or forgetting about it. I really think that one must be in the import business or else give up. It is not worth the effort to be an exporter and one who wishes to see the country at same time

Hawaii seems to me to a more remote extension of the better & old time aspects of Coney Island. Much more orderly, but the same trend. American genius for commercialization seems to have no limits. In a few years I predict that this place, i.e. Waikiki Beach area will have no more charm or anything new to offer than Atlantic City had only a few years ago. Too bad that American super ego & super desire for money cannot be put to rest. Soon as the war in Vietnam is over the developers will be in to show the "sights" I fear. How long will it be that we can "retreat" to the Orient to find an interesting & refreshing view on life.? — It is so different now, but how long will it be so.? Perhaps for long. The Japanese are intensely interested in occidentalizing their society along economic and commercial lines, but not personal. It is of course difficult to distinguish these motives in effect, but the Nipponese just could not become "western-ized" in any reasonably short time. I see clear evidence of this in my own experience and think that I am right. It will take generations of social contact on the most personal level to alter the Japanese to our Western ways, in particular social customs and in particular personal relations. The latter are so different and so difficult to understand. A little knowledge is a dangerous thing, but if this fact is understood it makes possible an insight which may lead to far more knowledge.

In retrospect and to close these few notes on Japan. —

One mystery remains —

Why, when the Japanese re-built Hiroshima did they try to re-produce the old city - the narrow streets may be just a bit wider, but it is the old Hiroshima - a bit better, perhaps but the
